

Remembrance

by Noel Evans

As we gather here today
We remember those
Who were injured or passed away
Family and friends
And the stranger too
Green white and gold
Red white and blue
The space that they've left
Blown our lives apart
Gone long before us
But forever in our hearts
We may never reason
Or ever work out why
Our loved ones were taken from us
Gone in the blink of an eye
The feelings that we have
The anger and the pain
The guilt and the suffering
We never want to feel again
Brothers and sisters
Fathers and mothers
Sons and daughters
And significant others
We struggle on
For we are the brave
And we thank the lord
For each day another life is safe
And even though they are gone
And their smiles we cannot see
We are gathered here together
United in memory
Memories of ones hatred
Towards our fellow man
Caused us to lose our loved ones
We carry on the best we can
To build a better future
For the generations who lie in wait
And remember those gone before us
And try to keep our faith.
